Illinois Pioneers: Champaign Schools

Duration: 00:27:07
 Date: 07/22/2010
 Produced: Copyright: © 2010 University of Illinois
 Genre: Documentary

Description:
 Host John Paul and his guests talk about earlier times in local schools and look at historic photos of schools, classrooms and leaders such as Dr. Hartwell C. Howard, for whom Dr. Howard School is named. Bridgewater helped integrate Lincoln School, now an apartment building at the corner of Healey and State streets, in 1917. She and her brother were the only black students, because most African-Americans lived in the north part of town and attended another school. Van Ness attended Bondville grade school, which was closed by the district in 1971. She was in the first graduating class from Centennial High School. "It will be a chance to look back at how the school district has evolved over the years," Paul said. The program will also look at some of the schools that are no longer there, about some of the sports teams that won state championships, and about periods when enrollment soared, resulting in the building of schools to keep up with the numbers of children, he said. Episode number 105, original air date July 22, 2010
