CAR TROUBLE is not unusual for many high school students but a one-cylinder, five-dollar car sometimes proves to be more trouble than it's worth.

Seniors

598 Recall Tearful Games, Dateless Dances, Hours of Study

Twelve years of education, saturated with endless repetition and lined with a few important questions, tempered by a million cold football games and a midnight pizza, muted with defeat and softened by a goodnight kiss

Seniors remembered the post-prom and the picnic, and shared the common burden of heavy eyelids. In silent moments, they chuckled over recollections of motley crews of female football players at pep assemblies, or in moments still deeper, reflected upon friendships and wondered what made them grow, or why tears and arguments were big enough to end them. The elections won and lost, the Beat Urbana Week which hurt so much, the memory of hectic bus rides from Jefferson Junior High as sophomores—so many things so far away somehow seemed real again as they waited in line to be measured for caps and gowns.

But a senior year is more than events; it is a mood. Having achieved all they held to be of vital importance as sophomores and juniors, seniors were left helplessly susceptible to the beloved disease, Senioritis. The victims were stricken with a tendency to play and a strong allergy to work. But in some unknown source, there lurked enough energy to carry on. Perhaps the motivation lay in the sometimes reluctant realization that this had been more than preparation for the world of their time, but an actual entering into it. Confusion and depression struck as they collected their thoughts on future plans; questions were answered by questions; and finally, the step was taken. They headed their separate ways to be accepted or rejected, to be happy or dissatisfied, to succeed or fail.

They were the class of '66.

This year's senior class officers—clockwise from the top: are Bill Woods, president; Ellen Quinlan, vice-president; Hugh Good, treasurer; and Marv Miller, secretary.

SECRET STRATEGIES develop from basement conspiracies—seniors brush up billiard techniques to impress Saturday night dates. Pool and bowling rank as favorite pastimes.

WHEN THOUGH TALENT was questionable and nerves were a little rattled, Barbara Gorman could not resist a Sunday afternoon trot. Scars, bruises, and even a few casts often marked such brave seniors—the Monday after.
