Rosemary staff works at a late night to complete the final deadline.

The noisy pluck-pluck of typewriters in the wee hours of the morning, smeared carbon paper on hands and faces, the smell of cokes and potato chips—these are all parts of editing a yearbook. It's really not bad at all, though. It just gets somewhat hectic before each deadline when everyone rushes around frantically, yelling for pictures and copy. Few people realize how much work goes into producing a yearbook. However, like any worthwhile activity, it is time well spent for a purpose that is well worth accomplishing.

As the last pages go to press and the staff breathes a sigh of relief, I would like to express my thanks to those persons who made this book possible—to the Rosemary staff members who gave a great amount of time and much hard work, to the photographers who were called upon on all occasions in order to get just the "right" picture, to Mrs. Le Seure whose expert advice guided us at many trying moments, and to the students and faculty of Urbana High School, for without you this 1964 Rosemary would have been impossible to produce.
