Dear Patrons:

As our lives become more sophisticated, and in many ways more complicated and challenging, our demand for individuals who can provide needed products and services increases. Expansions, restructuring, moving, etc., prompt all of us to wonder – “Who does what and where are they located? And how do I get in touch with them?” The diversity that exists in any community can also add to the dilemma of where are those select individuals that fit into the unique categories that have been defined by consumers and those whose task it is to develop the demographic profiles of communities, markets, and industries.

The results of our endeavor to provide a snap shot view of the community’s minority business, management, educational, and administrative segment are contained within these pages. Those that have an interest in the economic landscape of this community will have a clearer view of how truly diverse the topography is. This project has compiled a list of individuals who have demonstrated talent and will bring to light some who were hidden from our view.

Samuel Johnson once said, “Knowledge is of two kinds. We know a subject ourselves, or we know where we can find more information upon it.” Thus, this book serves to put Mr. Johnson’s words into action.

Sincerely,

Joe Page
President
Community Collaboration for Economic Development (CCED)

Greetings Patrons:

The African American community of the Champaign-Urbana area has undergone many changes over the years. Many of these changes have resulted in great progress for us, while others have set us back further than where we began. In order for us to gain momentum and advance in society, we must know and understand each other. The only way to achieve these goals is to communicate. The 2002-2003 African American Business Directory will facilitate this communication. Let this directory motivate us all to make it our number one priority to support African American businesses and professionals first.

Networking is the key to success and advancement in this ever-changing world. As we view the social and economic situation of our society, we must ensure that we are a part of its growth and progression. Each one of us is a tool in a large toolbox. It is up to us to tap into our resources in order to build a solid community network. Too many of us are in the shadows – unseen and unheard. This reinforces our underrepresented status in society. It is hoped with this resource book that our presence will be seen and heard as a dynamic force in society.

Please take the time to peruse the pages before you. Know your community, know your people, network, and strategize. Businesses are waiting to be built and societal changes are waiting to occur. The future is now and it is up to us to make it happen.

Yours in the struggle,

Cleveland Jefferson
President
National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
Champaign County Branch
