Preface

These Afro-Scholar Working Papers are being distributed by the Afro-American Studies and Research Program at the University of Illinois for the purpose of sharing works in progress, and reprints of articles in the field of Afro-American Studies. Each article is chosen for its methodological and/or substantive contribution, or its innovativeness. We believe this series is important because through it we can share our work and the work of others. The purpose of the series is to provide the basis for criticism. This is essential. We welcome your comments.

This compilation of theses and dissertations by Blacks or about Blacks at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign is historically noteworthy. It reveals that Blacks began to trickle into graduate programs at the state of Illinois' "flagship" campus long before the post-Martin Luther King racial revolution in America. Their numbers were never large, but these titles provide evidence of at least a marginal concern with the welfare and status of America's largest minority.

One may quickly discern that the largest number of Graduate College degrees were earned in Education. This trend reflects a national development, and the University of Illinois is no exception in this regard. Conversely, graduate degree output for Blacks in the sciences and in agriculture was and is minimal, reflecting, again, a national trend.

The thesis and dissertation topics and titles reflect a wide range of concern, but in the time that has elapsed since St. Elmo Brady received his degree in chemistry in 1916, the problems facing black Americans have become more numerous and more complex and, at times, more insoluble. It is our hope that the eighty-seven departments that participate in the work of the Graduate College will strengthen their minority recruitment programs and provide more students who can study and formulate new and better solutions for the Black man in America in the coming years. The need is great.

INTRODUCTION

This listing is the product of a major project of the Afro-American Studies and Research Program at the University of Illinois-Urbana. Its focus is primarily on graduate research by and about Afro-Americans at the University of Illinois-Urbana. The document is divided into four parts:

1. Theses and Dissertations on the Afro-American Experience. This section contains a list of theses and dissertations focusing on the Afro-American experience. Though primarily focused on the United States, this section also includes work on Latin America and the Caribbean. The reader should note that these writings are by persons of various nationalities.
2. Theses and Dissertations by Afro-Americans: Topics Other Than Afro-American Studies. This section contains a list of theses and dissertations by Black Americans that focus on topics other than aspects of the Afro-American experience. Whereas the first section primarily reports graduate research in the social sciences and humanities, this section includes work in a wide variety of disciplines.
3. Degrees and Certificates Received by Afro-Americans: Areas of Concentration not Having Thesis Requirement. This section includes a listing of degrees and certificates awarded to Black Americans upon the completion of programs in areas not requiring the writing of a thesis.

The present document is a preliminary edition. We are issuing it to encourage more widespread involvement in correcting errors (of omission and commission), and to solicit funds to publish it in a more permanent manner. The permanent edition of this document will include an expanded introduction, a preface, a summary of the data, and a methodological appendix.

We believe that this listing stands as a testament both to a long record of Black academic achievement and to a long record of research on the Black experience conducted at the University of Illinois-Urbana. While the conceptual innovations in Black intellectual traditions made possible by the Black studies movement of the 1960's and early 1970's should not be underestimated, this listing of theses and dissertations proves that a solid piece of Black intellectual history, spanning several generations of students, has been nurtured at the University of Illinois.

On the other hand, any perusal of this list reveals glaring holes and weaknesses. Some areas are not as well represented as others. (Some also compare unfavorably with their counterparts at comparable institutions.) In most areas, the production of intellectual work on the Black American experience, and especially the completion of graduate studies by Black American students, can be readily periodized. Such an approach reveals that in most areas certain decades are quite "white." Moreover, in certain areas there are fewer recent Afro-American graduates, and/or less research about the Afro-American experience, than in previous years.

As previously noted, many of the summary findings of our study will be provided in the forthcoming permanent edition of this report. The overall picture is this: While the University of Illinois had made a substantive contribution to the study of the Afro-American experience, and while Black students have been able to finish degree programs, much more needs to be done.

It has taken about three years to complete this project. We encourage our colleagues to contribute additional names or corrections. We hope our colleagues, students and prospective students will find this document useful.
