Ancient Relics?

Once again, this year the ROSEMARY has asked various members of UHS faculty to recollect their thoughts of when they were in high school. As you read over the essays below, you will hopefully see that, contrary to popular belief, they were once just like you and me.

1968 seemed to be the last grasp of innocence at Urbana High. Our classes had already begun the peace marches and candlelight vigils, yet we were still having sock hops in the old gym and slumber parties. We were caught in a changing world and struggled to keep up. In the classroom, subject relevance and the search for individuality became dominant themes. Women's liberation, civil rights and peace were common subjects for debate. We were intolerant of the easy answer, but we wanted to solve our problems in the present, not some ambiguous future. Still, we were firmly rooted in the past. We drove endless circuits around

On the eve of my twenty-fifth high school reunion my memories as a student have been reduced to those that had the most impact on me at the time. The two that stand out the most are the assassination of President Kennedy and the fire that destroyed half the high school. In both cases we got two days out of school but my reactions were quite different. In November of my sophomore year every student's dream came true when I received a call from my best friend and was told that the High School was burning. I rushed to the school to watch the old 1920 addition burn to the ground. The 1956 addition was saved and after two days of clean-up we returned to what was left. I can sympathize with the class of '89 for having to put up with all of the inconveniences of the last two years. I went through similar circumstances. We used classrooms in churches and the VFW Hall for the rest of my high school career. We were bussed every hour to a different part of the city to attend classes. We had 10 minutes between each class. Our gym had been saved so we didn't get out of P.E. The shop area became classrooms with plywood partitions that were open on the top and the bottom. We amused ourselves by crawling under and into the next classroom or organizing a mass air bombardment of paperwads on the class next door. The new section of the school wasn't completed until after we graduated, so I never received any of the benefits from the fire.

Steak-n-Shake on Green to see our friends and to be seen. We ate lots of 25¢ burgers at McDonald's and greasy fries at Race Inn. Most Friday nights, after the mandatory basketball or football game, we cruised to the Tigers' Den. We arrived fashionably late and watched the lowerclassmen dance silly.

Chicago, Iron Butterfly, the Beatles, Jimmi Hendrix, Led Zeppelin, and the Doors kept us moving. James Taylor, Joni Mitchell, Judy Collins, and Bob Dylan kept us singing. Everybody seemed to play the guitar — or wanted to, and everybody wrote songs or poetry. We searched for the anthem of our time.

The other experience brought a more somber reaction when the school librarian announced in study hall that President Kennedy had been shot. My generation will always remember where they were and what they were doing when they heard the news.

Smoking, drinking and drugs were "un-cool;" activities were our major source of recreation. But the class of 1968 was on the edge of tumult. We had to confront the problems that lay before us, but we could not without the loss of our innocence.

— GAYLE DUNN
Class of 1968
Urbana High School

My high school years were a strange mixture of youthful innocence and harsh reality. I was in high school from 1964 through 1968. On a daily basis, we were normal adolescent high school kids. School was very structured, and the administration was still able to exert a phenomenal amount of control. Boys had to have shirts tucked in, and girls whose skirts were above the knee were sent

My memories of teenage years generally revolve around school. Except for family and church, most of my time was spent in some type of activity at DeMotte High School. DeMotte is a small Indiana town. There were 57 in my graduating class of 1965. I played three sports, played trumpet in the band (including taps at military funerals!), acted in school plays and was a class and student officer. Jobs were reserved for Saturdays only and certainly took second seat to school activities. If you have seen the movie, "Hoosiers," you have some idea of life in a small Indiana town. From elementary through high school, I attended, served as statistician, or played in basketball games. I still have a letter from Bobby Knight when he was home to change. I remember a boy who shaved his head on a dare, and he was EXPELLED from school. It was still a time of separate male/female PE and health classes, only skirts and dresses for girls, and closed-campus lunch. The school had 2,000 students, and we had five lunch periods. I hated the year I had the fifth lunch period — we ate about 1:00, and there was never any food left! Before school we all hung out in the Commons to talk with our friends. We respected most of our teachers but kept a formal distance, rarely discussing "real life" with any of them. I do remember doing stupid things though. One time I shot disappearing ink on my history teacher's starched white shirt. I thought he was going to pass out in horror.

After school and on weekends we "buzzed" Steak and Shake. Fast food was unheard of until my sophomore year when a MacDonal'd's was built in my city. Hamburgers were 25 cents! There were no pizza parlors, and the only diet drinks available were Tab and Fresca. On dates we went to the drive-in movies or to dances. Our music was the Beatles. Drugs were not prevalent. Very few students had after-school jobs; therefore, no one ever fell asleep during class.

However, in looking back, I see those particular four years as being a period of an assistant coach at West Point!

In many ways, the relationships among students and uncertainties about those relationships is the same today as it was in 1965. There is more pressure on students today from drugs to college admission. But, there is also much more assistance available to students to help them succeed. Students with special needs or handicaps got virtually no help. It really was sink or swim. Our main worry was Viet Nam.

The big place to take a date for us was the drive-in theater. We would go all year. In the winter you would rent a heater to go along with the speaker that you hung inside your car. The "Drive-In" with real carhops was the local hangout. You could get two hamburgers a dramatic change. We as youth saw our Camelot world altered forever. Between my eighth grade and senior year, John and Robert Kennedy and Martin Luther King were assassinated. Push turned to shove to gain equal rights for both Blacks and women. The television reporting of the Watts riots of the early sixties and of the violence of the Vietnam War etched vivid images in my mind. "Causes" became very important. Teens began to think, to discuss, and to form opinions. We watched the news and reacted. All of us who were in high school during the turbulent sixties were very much affected by current events. It seems we saw the world change practically overnight. Comparing the students then to those I see now, there appears to be a resurgence of interest in what's going on in the world. Many students today seem to genuinely care about making a positive impact on the world. This is very reassuring to me.

— JANICE PRESLEY

basket of fries, and a green river for about one dollar. The Beatles arrived my junior year, but crew cuts remained the hairstyle in DeMotte. "Going Steady" was the way to date with the girl wearing the boy's high school class ring wrapped in yards of angora yarn. Life was probably a mixture of "Happy Days" and the "Wonder Years."
