Who can forget the first class competition? Drooling officers lined up for the mouth-watering relay. Presidents led in the feast. Race was close but seniors won.

Sophomores Lay Siege to Yellow Labyrinth

Sophomore year: A year of confusion, of indecision ... a year of envy, of longing ... a year of searching, of daring ... a year of Discovering.

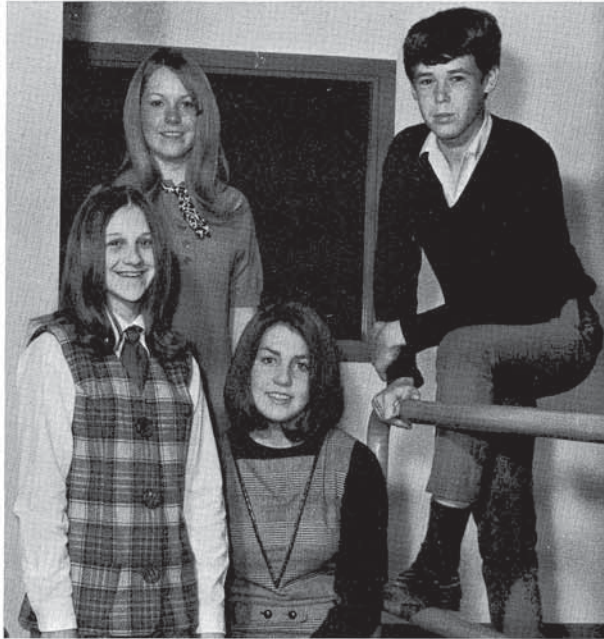

Wanting to conform, yet striving for individuality, sophomores experienced traditional growing pains. But the pains soon wore off as experience grew. The once identical yellow-tiled halls slowly turned recognizable and endless class periods became bearable. Even more important, the excitement of new acquaintances developed into the warmth of lasting friendships.

As this new class began to think of the time when they would assume Charger leadership, their thoughts explored the power of money and their apparent lack of it. But no longer merely followers, they turned money-making programs into realities.

The power of a driver's license and a worker's permit gave added dimensions to sophomore life. Independence flourished and new responsibilities added maturity. And with this maturity came the enjoyment of larger ideals and newer concepts. Seemingly unimportant details now took on new light as the future suddenly meant involvement.

The lighter aspects of high school life benefitted, too, from this change of mind. Representing a great percentage of Charger spirit, the sophomores encompassed the student body in their enthusiasm of both sports and activities.

Finding themselves and molding a united group from their discoveries, sophomores emerged—Class of '71.

Drivers' Permits, Licenses Highlight Sophomore Year

The thrills of aiming a two-ton lethal weapon at the general public somehow held more appeal than a stuffy classroom to this year's sadistic driver's education students. Even the frequent hysterical screaming and crying from panic-stricken teachers failed to squash enthusiasm.

After all, what could be more enjoyable than flying madly over monstrous curbs, dismissing a few sneaky stop signs or striking that nasty little brake with just the right amount of force? Perhaps the only better aspect to this was getting time off from school to do it!

Passengers enjoy a safe and enjoyable cruise during Driver's Ed. instruction.
