Junior class members seemed to support women's liberation when they elected four girls as their officers: Cathy Smith, treasurer; Terry

McMahon, president; Susan Scanlan, secretary; Lollie Yancey, president, who pose on the new furniture in the courtyard.

According to Webster, a junior is a student in his next to last year". The juniors, however, were much more than that. What with class rings, hall decorations, and prom, juniors participated in nearly every event offered at Cen-

The junior girls had a chance to take part in junior gym and cheerleading, while the junior guys participated in football, basketball and other sports.

Besides doing things for fun, the juniors also had to live up to the responsibility of buying class rings, which went for $15.00 from last year! Another big step was taking the SAT and ACT tests, which showed if their past eleven years produced any knowledge. Of course, there were many other requirements for college, for instance, keeping up grades, class rank, and most important — money.

Traditionally, the junior-senior prom was given by the juniors every spring. They supplied music, decorations, and refreshments through funds in the junior class treasury.

"A student in his next to last year"? No, Mr. Webster, the juniors of 1973 and Champaign Central were much more than that.

New Sophomores Struggle with Lockers on First Day

They all flocked in at once, all 496 of them slightly scared and nervous. Most of them, if not all, were more than anything lost.

It was hard for them to fight their way through crowded halls, but that wasn't too bad of a problem. The real problem was getting their lockers open once they found them.

Did you notice a lot of sophomores wandering around by themselves? No, they all stuck together, either afraid of the building, or the upperclassmen who looked down at them.

They sat for a long 70 minutes in scorching hot classrooms, trying to make heads or tails out of what the teacher was saying.

Figuring out which lunch they had gave them trouble too. Some had A and B lunch, by mistake of course. The sophomores liked being able to go wherever they wanted, but a half hour?

The juniors and seniors ate up being asked: "Where is the girls' gym?" "How do you find the cafeteria?"

As their friends laughed, the sophomores said "Remember, you were once one too."
